Information for visitors to Degas to Matisse: The Maurice Wertheim Collection from the Harvard University Art Museums and Ansel Adams: The Early Years

Ticketing

Admission to The Cleveland Museum of Art and its permanent collection is free. Tickets for Degas to Matisse and Ansel Adams are $5 and allow entrance to both shows; tickets for students and senior citizens (60 and older) are $4; children 11 and under are free. Museum members are admitted free, but must have tickets. Tickets will be available starting September 29 in person at the Museum, by phone through the ticketing service Advantix at 216/241-6444 or 1-800-766-6048, and in person at Advantix outlets; Advantix adds a $1.75 service fee to the price of each ticket it sells. Tickets purchased in person at the Museum carry no service charge (cash or check only). Museum members may obtain free tickets in person at the Museum with no service charge, or through Advantix with the $1.75 service fee. All telephone orders, including requests for free tickets, must be made through Advantix. Lost tickets will not be replaced, and tickets cannot be exchanged.

Tickets will be timed for entrance to the exhibition at half-hour intervals. Tickets for 4:30-6:45 times on Sundays will be available free--a maximum of four per request--only at the Museum box office beginning the Wednesday before each Sunday.

Groups

Adult groups of fifteen or more qualify for the reduced price of $4 with advance reservations. For information, call 216/421-7340, extension 462. Group reservations are accepted by phone or by mail. Groups are required to pay the minimum amount ($60) in advance to secure their reservations; full payment is due before the visit; no refunds.
